U.S., Prodded by Mujib, Recognizes Bangladesh

By Robert Siner

WASHINGTON, April 4 (IHT). -The United States today gave formal diplomatic recognition to Bangladesh and pledged to help the new nation, which broke away from Pakistan during the December Indo-Pakistani war, in ma task of reconstruction.

The announcement, by Secretary of Stete William P. Rogers, came just a day after the prime minister of Bangladesh, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, had warned that, if the United States did not grant his country formal recognition, the American Consulate in Dacca would be shut down within 10 days.

In a statement released by State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey, Secretary Rogers said:

"As we now enter into an offi-cial relationship with the govern-ment and the people of Bangladesh, I want to express, on bebalf of all the American people, our good wishes for the future. I also want to reaffirm our intention to develop friendly bilateral relations and be helpful as Bangladesh faces lts immense task of relief ar (reconstruction."

U.S. Rebukes Russia for Aid to Hanoi

By Fred Farris

WASHINGTON, April 4 (IHT). -The United States implicitly rebuked the Soviet Union today for en bling the North Vietnamese to invade South Vietnam but said there is no change in President Mixon's plan to visit Moscow next

State Department chief spokesman Popert J. McCloskey brought the Soviet Union into the administration's public reaction to the five-day-old Communist Offensive by saying that "obviously a lot of heavy Russian equipment is making this attack possible,"

But he said he knew of no plan to bring up this matter with the Russians now. It was understood Secretary of State William P. Rogers has not seen Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin on the subject since the start of what the administration has labeled a "clear invasion," across the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren, asked whether the Vietnam situation would alter President Nixon's scheduled visit to the Soviet Union in late May, said, "There is no apprehension those plans will change.

Both the White House and the State Department, reiterating what the White House said yesterday, declared "all options remain open" for Mr. Nixon to take whatever countermeasures he considers necessary.

There were indications Mr. Nixon was nearing a decision on Nixon was nearing a decision on whether to order a resumption of heavy bombing against North Vietnam. Reds Acclaim Triumph

HONG KONG. April 4 (NYT). The press in China and North Vietnam have acclaimed the new Communist offensive in South Vietnam as a major triumph for the Viet Cong and a blow to Vietnamization. Reports from Peking and Hanol on the fighting did not say that troops from North Victnam were involved, crediting the offensive solely to the "people's liberation armed forces" of South Vietnam. Hsinhua, the official Chinese news agency, said the Viet Cong had launched "repeated fierce attacks on the military bases and establishments of the U.S.-puppet clique in northern Quang Tri Province." It stated that since March 30 the enemy had been badly battered and compelled to take to his heels and retreat heiter-skeiter."

Ulster Peace Group Reports Gains

From Wire Dispatches

BELFAST, April 4.—There were reports today of growing Catholic pressure for a truce by terrorists. The truce movement was mounted over the weekend by Catholic women saying "we've had enough" in 32 months of violence in Northern Ireland.

But there were also reports of countermoves by the illegal Irish Republican Army to quash the peace crusade and maintain Catholic support for its war to unify Ulster with the Catholicdominated Irish Republic.

In Belfast, British troops battled teday with men who the army asid were IRA gunmen seeking to undermine the women's peace campaign. An army spokesman said machine gunnera fired on a British patrol, which returned the fire in Andersonstown, a Catholic area where the truce drive began. The army said the terrorists broke off the battle and escaped. There were no casualties, the army reported.

Two battles erupted in Londonderry, the province's second largest city and a Catholic stronghold, and the army sald it may have wounded one terrorist in the Creggan district there.

The Londonderry command of the IRA's militant Provisional wing indicated today that the Beliast Catholic women's peace crusade may have spread to the second city. The indication came in an IRA "Provo" statement that it was willing "to meet representatives from the Creggan, Pogside and Brandywell areas"three Catholic districts-'to discus: what is best for the people of these areas."

in reaffir line policy against recent British reace initiatives, the London-Carry "Provoe" said: "We wish to state quite categorically that we. tco want peace-but not peace at any price. If the people of Free Derry will be prepared to sell out the men behind the [internment camps'] wire and the men on the run, they are not the same people who time after time repulsed attacks on their areas by the armed might of the British Army."

The Provos' statement came two days before a Londonderry meeting which is expected to hear a peace plea from a former opposition leader in the suspended provincial parliament. John Hume, of the Social Democratic and Labor party, is believed ready to couple anti-IRA appeals with his party's peace proposals on Thursday.

Discussing the Kleindienst nomination, Sen. Mansfield said, "My guess is as of now, yes," Mr. Kleindienst would be confirmed. They've got to build a case against him and as of now, that case has not been built." He said, "I think that what they ought to do is disassociate" the nomination from a continuing investigation of ITT and corporate influences on government, which both the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Judiciary Committee should undertake, and let the nomination "come to a bead."

Sen. $1-Million Loss by Teachers Feared

Ohio Probes Possible Irregularity in Sales of ITT Stock

By Sanford J. Ungar

WASHINGTO , April 4 (WP). -The attorney general of Oblo announced last night that he is investigating a large sale of International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. stock last summer to that state's teachers' retirement system.

State Attorney General William J. Brown said that, working with the Justice Department and the Securities Exchange Commission, he is seeking to determine whether the teachers' retirement fund was "damaged" by "securities violations" and "insider trading" of stock by ITT officers. He said that the teachers may have incurred a paper loss of more than $1 million since that

The retirement fund purchased a substantial quantity of ITT series N preferred stock last July. just as ITT was negotiating a settlement of three anti-trust cases with the Justice Department.

That settlement included a forced divestiture of $1 billion worth of assets by ITT. Days after it was reached, the price of all of ITT's stock issues dropped significantly.

An associate of consumer rights' advocate Ralph Nader aaid yesterday that the Ohio teachers' fund bought 120,000 shares of the ITT preferred stock at prices between $78 and $33 per sbare, more than half of it from a New York iovestment banking firm with close ties to ITT.

Mr. Robertson's letter suggested that the secrecy in which the ITT settlement was negotiated constitutes a clear abuse of the public trust... and in fact re-aulted in substantial economic injury to defenseless and unsuspecting memoers of the public," such as the Ohio teachers.

He sold 2.664 shares on June 18, the day after ITT learned of the impending settlement through a phone call to ITT director Felix G. Rohatyn from Mr. Kleindienst and Richard W. McLaren, then assistant attorney general.

Financial Hardship

Mr. Rohatyn, a partner in the New York investment banking firm of Lazard Freres, which earned aubstantial commissions on ITT's acquisition of the Hartford Fire Insurance Co., had previously met privately with Mr. Eleindienst to press the corporation's argument of "financial hardship" if it were forced to give up the insurance company in the anti-trust litigation.

Mr. Robertson's letter to Sen. Eastland charged that at least 70,600 of the ITT shares bought hy the Ohio teachers had come directly from Lazard Frères. He pointed out that one sale of 30.000 ITT shares by Lazard Frères came around July 1, only two days after Mr. Rohatyn had met with Mr. Kleindienst to check on the progress of the settlement negotiations.

Because stock transactions pass through brokers for both buver and seller, it is ordinarily difficult to trace the identity of both parties. But Mr. Robertson said that his cooclusions were based on "extensive study of trading

U.S. delegate William Schanfele told the UN Commission on Human Rights that it is not just Jews but Lithnanians, Latvians, Estonians, Soviet Armenians indeed all Soviet citizens, who suffer from the Soviet govern-ment's refusal to consider emigration as a right rather than a rare privilege."

The U.S. delegate said it is "heartening to note" there has been substantial modification of restrictions on the emigration of Soviet Jews.

"We would urge that remaining restrictions on emigration and travel be eased so that all Soviet citizens who wish to exercise their right to freedom of movement may be permitted to do so," he added.

Soviet delegate Nikifor Yevdokeyer rejected Mr. Schaufele's statement as "slanderous" and described it as a diversion to draw attention away from U.S. practices in Indochina.

He noted that U.S. citizens do not have the right to travel to Cubs or China and said that a number of Jews who had emigrated to Israel are now returning to the Soviet Union.

Paper Printing Only Good News Gets Some Bad News: Its Demise

SACRAMENTO, Calif., April 4 (AP) -A newspaper that printed only good news has folded because of creditors who didn't look on the bright side of things.

And, typically, the bad news of the demise of the Good News paper will never be printed in the biweekly tabloid.

"It would be uncharacteristic of the Good News paper to print the story of its own demise," said publisher Bill Bailey. a father of five who started the venture in 1970 with $100. -"After 16 months of publication—sometimes spasmodically—and despite a circulation of 10,000 in all 50 states and mine future earnings.

He said his favorite good-news story was the first edition's lead item, which began: "In the United States last year, 196, 459,483 citizens did not commit a criminal offense, 4,896,720 college students did not participate in a riot or student demonstration and 201,489,710 citizens did not use illegal

New Tennessee Williams Play: 'Not Major'

By Clive Barnes NEW YORK (NYT). - Only Americans write plays set in the poised, never-never land of a bar. Saroyan, O'Neill, Charles Gordone, Tennessee Williams, all have used the bar as a symbol of the transience of American society, a resting period outside of the punctuation of events and yet at the same time an indication of a world adrift. Tennessee Williams's new play,

"Small Craft Warnings," which opened Sunday night at the Off-Broadway Truck and Warehouse Theater, is a study of people sur-viving. A group of men and women—unlovely but modestly human-are around a bar. In some ways they are derelict people. They are drinking heer in this bar on the Soutbern California coast, getting quietly drunk, and slightly abusive and The characters are not remarkable, although not uninteresting. There is a lady beautician of uncertain age but certain courage, who lives in her trailer with a male slob of a sex object who is content that his sexual prowess is a sure meal ticket. There is a drunken discredited doctor, who apparently lives on illegal abortions and drinks too much brandy. There is Violet, a simple sexual waif who cries too much, and Steve, who weakly looks after her. Then there are a couple of homosexuals, the elder of the two upset because the younger wants to show affection.

ADELAIDE, Australia.—Allen Ginsberg, the American beat poet, who is here for the Adelaide Art Festival, has learned to dance like a kangaroo and to chant like an aborigine. "The aborigines have the greatest oral tradition of epic poetry extant," he told reporters, "but most Australians, have never even heard aborigines chanting. They were just ignored. But I am a poet and I know great poets when I hear them in any lan-

DARIS (IHT).—The assertion that Ginsberg knows great poetry when he hears it "in any language" will not lift many eye-brows among his disciples and admirers: It's just a matter of beat, no doubt. The news that he is now playing the Australian circuit -which in poetry-reading circles might appear roughly equivalent, say, to booking Artur Rubinstein for a tour of Patagonia—could stir a bit more surprise. But it shouldn't, because Australia is apperently, at the moment, Where It's At.

The same news item added the information that "Ginsberg intends to continue his researches around Alice Springs (where Germaine Greer is currently campaigning among the aborigines who live on the dried-up bed of the River Todd . . .)" incidental information, the item neglects to say what Miss Green was campaigning for, or against. She has never, as far as I know had anything to do with dried-up beds of any kind. She is, of course best known as one of the first (and loudest) Women's Lib campaigners, and a particularly resolute foe of bras, girdles, and all other garments designed to restrict females. Whether such items are much of a problem among the dried-up aborigines of the River Todd is something I have not yet been able to ascertain. But the possibility of a meeting in the Alice Springs area between two of the most tireless exhibitionists of our era is one too fraught with the raw material of epic poetry to be ignored Consider the picture: The hirsuite poet, dancing like a kangaroo, chanting like an aborigine (and perhaps whirling his Buddhist prayer wheel?) advances up the River Todd, expecting, reasonably enough, to encounter only local inhabitants, and suddenly finds himself confronted by a High Priestess of Women's Lib. One may be confident that Ginsberg, who was liberating everything in sight before Women's Lib, let alone Germaine Greer, was ever heard of, is not a man to be upstaged in a dried-up Australian river bed. On the other hand, the woman who struck fear into the heart of Maidenform, Inc., is nobody's punching bag.

The Battle

My guess is that Miss Greer, who has a tongue like a Gils monster's, would probably strike first. But Ginsberg has demonstrated on several continents his ability to be incoherent in halfa-dozen languages. He would be in there quickly, counterpunching with Vedic hymns, mantras, and bits of basic Anglo-Saxon. It is far from inconceivable, though, that after they had broken a lance or two in the initial joust, Ginsberg and Greer would recognize that many of their interests coincide. The poet has, by his own account, liberated more men than women, but he would nonetheless make a formidable ally for Miss Greer—as a nominal "enemy" in the war between the sexes who has crossed to the other side. He has also had a great deal more platform experience than Miss Greer. Loudon's Albert Hall is only one of a number of auditorhims in many parts of the world that, once having felt the vibrations of rg and such outspoken confreres as Lawrence Ferlinghetti,

To round out the act, there is a third potential recruit waiting in the wings. Their interest centers on "the aborigines' impro visation within a strict discipline of complex rhythms and cyclical with a multiplicity of options. The Awami League of Bangladesh, after winning enough votes to constitute the core of a revolution, is breaking up. Turkey's military, weary of party conflict, is prodding President Cevdet Sunay to rule by decree. And the Democratic party in the United States has so many presidential aspirants that the experts' prognostications are bogged down by a series of local contests that seem to reflect no national trends-or perhaps so many of them that the dominant themes are all but Whatever happened to consensus? It was very popular, and intellectually respectable, after World War II. Italy's Christian Democrats, and their analogues in West Germany, provided rallying points for so many that there was a tendency to say the old evil of bloc negotiation and manipulation, so characteristic of pre-war continental parliaments, had gone forever. Britain, despite the sharp ideological split between Labor and Conservative policies, managed to make the transition from one to the other several times without real confusion. Similarly, in the United States, the Eisenhower Republicans accepted the New Deal and went on from there; when the Goldwater Republicans broke with that practice, they were swamped. and Lyndon B. Johnson presided over one of the most massive expressions of consensus in American political history.

France was slower in reaching this stage. But Charles de Gaulle worked for it constantly, and achieved it at last-even his fall dld not wreck the Gaullist consensus, although its future is cloudier now.

Mr. Johnson's aggregation of political

Italy is facing its elections next month support spilt into many fragments on the rock of Vietnam. It is possible that the British tradition of accepting the acts of each successive government may not work with the Common Market_although Ireland has provided a new kind of consensus in Westminster, Can Italy emerge from its mire of contending ideologies? Can Turkey, which had an eminently viable government for many years, during and after World War II, recapture that mood?

> Consensus is a workable system of democratic rule, when it exists. But it calls for compromise on many issues, general agreement on many more, and the kind of leadership that can weld the whole into a legis:ative program and administrative practices that meet national aspirations and do not make too many errors. The extremists of whatever brand cannot stomach this kind of consensus; they regard it as hypocritical. as sacrificing ideals to practical considerations. Their consensus assumes absolutes, and since they are absolutely right by definition, those who are wrong must be clubbed into submission.

That fractionalism is a dominant theme in world polltics today is a result of many factors, from primitive tribalism to intellectual hair-splitting. It makes for an exciting scene, with any number of cilques and sects certain that they have the key to human happiness. But out of those clashing certainties comes confusion, and bombings and shootings-and, too often, the imposition of political absolutes by force. Consensus may be dull, it may compromise too much, It may not inspire. But purely adversary politics marches along those paths of intellectual, ethnic or ideological snobbery that lead but to the grave of popular rule.

formation Service at the very start of the cold war, it clearly intended that the material produced for foreign consumption should not in any way be used for political purposes at home. There has never been a change in that policy; yet Acting Attorney General Kleindienst now affects to read the law in precisely the opposite sense. Mr. Kleindienst has given Sen, Buckley of New York full legal support in the showing of a USIA film about Czechoslovakia on the senator's monthly television program. Mr. Kleindienst stretches a statute that expressly requires all such material to be available "for examination" by representatives of the American media and members of Congress into approval for its distribution to the public by television.

When the USIA some years ago contracted with a film company to show its movie "Jacqueline Kennedy's Asian Journey,"

When Congress launched the U.S. In- Republicans in Congress complained to the controller general about that "scheme to propagandize the American people." He agreed and warned that no such contracts would be approved in the future without express statutory authority, which the House had declined to provide.

Frank Shakespeare, director of the information agency, in retrospect now questions the propriety of having allowed Sen. Buckley, who is certainly a "political figure," to make domestic use of the film on Czechoslovakia, whatever its merits. He bas likewise apologized to Sen. Fulbright for the insulting remarks made about him by a USIA official on the television show that incorporated the film. And that aide has quite properly turned in his resignation. The fact remains that Sen. Buckley and Mr. Kleindienst have both displayed singularly poor judgment.

The Trade Deficit

The United States ran a trade deficit of foreign exchange. But the American demand $598 million in February—the second highest in its history. Its all-time record deficit of $821 million occurred last October, two months before the Smithsonian monetary agreement in which the dollar was effectively devalued by some 12 percent for the purpose of improving the U.S. trade and payments balance.

Does this mean that the Smithsonian agreement was a failure? The answer is almost certainly no. The February deficit -like the record October deficit before Itwas worsened by the West Coast dock strike, which had a heavier impact on exports than imports, as inbound ships were diverted to other ports while exports walted on the

Even without the impact of the dock strike. however, it must be recognized that the short-run effect of dollar devaluation has heen to worsen rather than improve the American trade position. Imports are more expensive and, before their volume shrinks, cost the United States more in foreign exchange; conversely, U.S. exports are cheaper and, before their volume grows, earn less for imports will eventually contract and the foreign demand for U.S. exports will excand. American producers, drawn by the bigger profits to be earned by selling abroad, will at the same time push harder on their for-

Judging by the experience of Britain and other countries that have devalued, some two years will elapse before the American trade position receives the full benefit of dollar devaluation. More effective administration measures to check United States inflation and spur productivity would reduce that

In reassuring businessmen or foreign central bankers, the administration often refers to this probable time lag, but it is not so clear that it believes its own statements. Aggressive threats of building a dollar bloc or of adopting various protectionist or mercantilistic measures only undermine belief at home and abroad that the American international economic position has been radically improved by the Smithsonian agreement. Nothing breeds confidence in others so much as confidence in oneself.

International Opinion

Russian View of U.S. Television

A typical evening of U.S. television is likely to include: Cutthroats with six-shooters at the ready, unearthly monsters whose eyes radiate phosphorescent death rays. huge children-eating ants, a suave private eye with a silencer on his pistol, a lovely amazon with a Smith & Wesson revolver in her purse, and corpses, pools of blood, bats, poisonous scorpions, sadistic vampires, werewolves, drug addicts and ghosts.

In recent years American life has been shaken by unprecedented outbursts of violence: Reprisals against Negro demonstrators, the shooting of student demonstrators, arrests and beatings of anti-war activists, and finally the dirty war in Vietnam. Television has simply kept pace with the "society of violence." No wonder that Americans sav that every country gets the kind of TV it

WASHINGTON.—The new U.S. Pacific strategy, readjusting this country's own defenses and its military relations with Asian allies, is now perceptibly taking shape. The strategy became inevitable after the Nixon doctrine was announced and following subsequent force reductions in South Vietnam, reversion of Okinaws to Japan and the altered status of Taiwan. Its basic change is decreased use of American ground forces in overseas areas and increased reliance upon American air and naval forces. This shift in em-phasis coincides with growing dependence upon ground forces of nations allied to the United States and a commitment to belp their modernization by additional aid programs.

One immediate result is enhanced importance of the sparsely inhabited Pacific Island area known as Micronesia conquered from Japan during World War II and, precisely 25 years ago, as-signed to U.S. trusteeship by the UN Security Council.

Altered Status

The new Pacific strategy calls for more bases in Micronesia but negotiations are to begin this month between American and Micronesian representatives to discuss the future of the islands including an aitered political the savings accomplished. No serious diplomatic snags are expected in Micronesia or Asian lands with which we already have formal defense treaties, like Thailand and the Philippines. But South Vietnam provides a special problem. Its protection is covered only by a protocol to SEATO and not by a normal alliance.

Ultimate Goal

Although in theory it would be possible to negotiate such a pact with Saigon, it is obviously out of the question for political reasons to even contemplate such a step -above all now. Instead, the program of reducing U.S. forces there continues apace. The ul-timate goal is to reduce the American military aid mission there to what it was in the Eisenhower years—not much more than 300 men.

But until Hanoi settles the prisoners of war question it is intended that a U.S. military presence—air, sea and ground will be kept in South Vietnam for an indefinite period.

The overall Pacific policy is being carried out with maximum. caution and minimum flamboyance. It has, one might say, twin objectives. It seeks to reduce the expense of protecting key positions or valid commitments while maintaining their effectiveness. And it seeks to lower the American military profile in the East without letting ... slip over the horizon of isolationism high regard for Humphrey, a less high regard for Sen. Edmund S. Muskie and a low opinion of Kennedy.

The White House attitude toward Humphrey and his chances of nomination may be influenced by wishful thinking, and by the continuing belief-or fear-that Muskie, despite his poor record as a vote-getter in the primaries, may be the most formidable opponent the President could face. Muskie still might be able to unite the party better than Humphrey, whose nomination almost surely would lead to a fourth party from the left. George Wallace as the nominee of a third party is all but taken for granted by Republican progposticators.

Because of the divisions among the Democrats and the inability of any candidate so far to demonstrate prowess as a vote-getter, the President is represented to be in a confident meod.

He recognizes that there are far more Democrats than Republicans and that there are pitfalls shead. Yet he is said to believe that both his economic and foreign policies will give him a solid base from which to campaign in the fall.

Bernard Levin From London:

Without some kind of external aid, whether dressed up as dockyard rent or given outright, Malta cannot survive economically.

you-won't-you dance staged' by Dom Mintoff, prime minister Malta, ended in the acceptance by this cross Maltese of Britain's final terms for a settlement: Under the new agreement Mr. Mintoff will get much less than he asked for, but much more than the previous arrangement involved, in payment for Britain's (and NATO's) use of the island as a naval base. But the long dispute raises a question that goes far wider than the problems of Maits, and that has been far too little considered.

The blunt truth about tha

Malta base is that it long ago ceased to have any positive importance for Britain and NATO: Its real usefulness disappeared when the era of nuclear warfare began. All Mr. Mintoff was left with apart from the links of sentiment binding Malta to Britain, was the negative importance of his island, the necessity of denying its facilities to the Russian Navy, and even that threat has been varily exaggerated. Mr. Mintoff went very near the brink: Over the brink lay ruin for Malta. For-and this is where the question goes so much wider-Malta is one of those former colonies of Britain which can never be fully self-supporting. With virtually no natural resources, it has had to rely, and will have to continue to rely, on the dockyard facilities (decreasingly important, as I have suggested) it could offer, and its tourist industry. Without some kind of external aid, whether dressed up as dock-yard rent or given outright, Malta cannot survive economically. But Malta is by no means the only territory from Britain's colonial past of which this is true.

Bitter Truth

The world is littered with islands and groups of islands, scraps of land and territorial appendages, which were once among the brightest jewels in Britain's imperial crown, and which have only recently had brought home them the bitter truth that political independence does not guarantee economic survival—indeed, that the two can be mutual—by inimical, if not mutually ex-

the West Indies, for instance have found this true. The comicopers story of Anguilla had its tragic side, too, for the dispute originated in the failure of a miniature federation constructed from three of the smallest West Indian territories (Anguilla, Nevis, and St. Kitts) in the hope-fully justified I may say-that such groupings offered the only chance of economic advance. The failure of the federation was caused by the great forgotten factor-nationalism. There is, it seems, no territory in the world so small or so peaceful that its inhabitants will not resent being merged with another, similar, territory nearby.

Indeed, the great hope of the formerly colonial Caribbean—the major federation between the larger states of the area_also collapsed some years ago for the same reason, and its eventual reconstruction (which is surely inevitable both historically and fi-

> But if Malta, and Gibraltar, and the smaller West Indian to lands, and the ex-dependencies of the Pacific and some of the African territories, cannot survive as self-governing and self-supporting entitles, does this mean that Britain must, as one of the legacies resulting from the demise of its empire, continue to suppose these countries forever?

A country which produces nothing that the world wants, or wants sufficiently to buy it in competition with other sources. of supply, has got to be supported somehow: Yet perpetual economic dependence of the country from which they have demanded and won their political independence cannot be good for the health or self-respect of any nation, how-

New Urgency

Federation is one answer: But: the experience of the West Indies suggests that it is an answer that the countries which it would benefit are not yet ready to accept it. Curiously enough, the other solution that has been proposed came very close to acceptance by Malta the last time Mr. Min-toff was in office there, It is full integration with Britain, so that such countries would be as much part of the United Kingdom as Hawaii, sey, is of the United States, and equally, able to participate in national prosperity. More, actually, because it is very much easier for the British gov. ernment to channel funds to economically depressed parts of the United Kingdom, in view of the very much more restricted. autonomy that Britain's regions have compared to the states of the Union.

Had the proposal to integrate Malta in this fashion been accepted (the chance had long since been lost by the time this latest round of negotiations began it might have led the way to-s. similar attachment by many other ex-colonial countries, and wa should have the member for Gibraitar or Anguilla or Fiji rising to speak in the Westminister House of Commons, to the astoo ishment of Simon de Montfort (who invented the place seven 2 centuries ago) but to the con siderable benefit of us all. As it is, the question may soon acquire a new urgency, as with the apparently inevitable decline of the sugar industry in the West Indies-for many of the islands: this is virtually the only source of income and employment. But his only recommendation for accomplishing that is for Israel to withdraw and then presumably to trust that Arab goodwill, reasonableness, and reliability will assure to our people a tranquil future.

No Israeli government can accent that recommendation as the basis for a peace settlement. For 25 years our country has lived under the constant threat of annihilation; the only two times it has extended its borders, let Arab spokesmen honestly acknowledge, were after the full-scale but unsuccessful military onslanghts by Arab armies in 1948 and 1967. Israel has patiently invited the opportunity to negotiate, but no Arab government, nor any other body capable of honoring an agreement, has ever consented even to talk.

Taiwan Problem

In reading Edwin O. Reischauer's "What the Talwanese Really Feel" (IHT March 22) one cannot help being struck by a large error that leads Mr. Reischauer into a contradiction. mistakenly exaggerates the political importance of the Tai-wanese when he says: "The Taiwan problem... exists now and will continue to exist in the future primarily because of the attitudes of the Taiwanese people them-selves," This is just not the case. There is a Taiwan problem because of the existence of two rival Chinese governments, one governing the mainland and one governing Taiwan, and each ciaiming rightful sovereignty over both. The presence of the United States is an important third factor. The Taiwanese do not play a role and this is because they are politically repressed, as Mr. Reischauer, in contradiction to his earlier statement on their importance, says. It is precisely because the Taiwanese are politically un-important that Mr. Nixon could agree that "all Chinese on either side of the Taiwan Strait maintain there is but one China and that Taiwan is a part of China."

Murray M. Weiss

Mr. Nixon, surely, is not unaware of the Taiwanese and their feelings as Mr. Reischauer suggests. Rather it is because he sees them as politically unimportant that he is choosing to ignore MARTIN E. GOLD. Colombo, Ceylon, Bustarella bluntly, is buildery. The word comes from busts; meaning envelope. Typi-cally, a top corporate executive keeps a stack of plain white envelopes stuffed with varying amounts of 10,000-lire notes (about $17) in his desk. When his company needs a isverable tax ruling a government con-tract, a building permit, or payment for services rendered the government, the executive calls in an intermediary or "con-sultant," and hands him an envelope. If it is not heavy enough, the consultant shakes his head, and the executiva fishes ior another.

Corruption in business, of course, is not an Italian monopoly. "It's just so much, with about $5 million in sales raports a more prevalent and less frowned upon, loss of $100,000. In the U.S., the company here," says Oleg P. Petroff, an American, would pay no income tax. Here, should

Although members of parliament are well paid by most standards—$2,000 a month—many must kick in as much as 50 percent of their pay to their party. To reimburse themselves, the politicians put the arm on

But there's no solution but to ride with it, hoping that constant follow-up and the liberal application of lire will keep things

The Tarman Collects

Italian taxation is particularly complex and, for collectors of bustarella, particularly rewarding as tax officials have enormous discretion in applying the laws. An accountant offers a hypothetical but realistic example: A chemical company a tax official find that chemical companies of similar size were profitable, he could legally assume that the company was trying to avoid taxation and assess it, say, at $200,000, Typically, a $10,000 bribe would cut the bill in balf.

Such payoffs are made in the form of fees to registered fiscal consultants. As long as ha gets results, what the consultant does with his fees is nobody's business but his own. And a corporate executiva might or might not siphon off for his own use some of the money ha tells his company is going for bribes.

Montedison Slush Fund

Italian businessmen-because they are so much more concerned with politicssay they are squeezed harder then foreigners. In the Montecatini case, Cesare Merzagora, a former senator, resigned after only eight months as chairman, citing his discovery of "billions of lire" in secret company accounts. A company spokesman confirms the existence of a secret political slush fund. "Apparently, this money went to political parties and newspapers." he saya. London and Europe

ContiCommodity Services, a Division of the Continental Grain Company, is the world's fastest growing futures house. In less than two years CCS has expanded throughout the U.S. Now CCS will open a limited number of professionally-managed offices in Loodon and the major cities in Europe to serve commercial,

CCS offers an attractive compensation plan plus unequalled communications, business development and financial support to individuals capable of building and managing a commodity futures office. These are ex-ceptional opportunities for the individual currently directing a commodity brokerage operation or for an experienced Account Executive who is ready to assume

If commodity trading is your profession—and you wish to explore the advantages of participating with CCS in the explosive growth of the futures markets—please write in full confidence to: L. B. Carr, ContiCommodity

BANCO ESPÍRITO SANTO E COMERCIAL DE LISBOA

The Hongkong and Shanghai

Banking Corporation

Encorporated in Hong Kong with Limited Liability

Highlights from The Chairman's Statement and International Survey for the year 1971.

Mr. J. A. H. Saunders, Chairman, speaking in shareholders in 30 March 1972 reported that 1971 had again been a satisfactory year for the Hongkong

The Hnngknng Bank's net profit increased by 17 per cent to £9.2 million.

Distribution for the year was 36 pence per share, slightly more than forecast, and an increase of 111 per cent.

A free scrip issue of one new sbare for ten is proposed. This follows scrip issues of one for ten for 1968 and 1970 and one for one for 1969. Since 1967 net profit earned has increased by 112 per cent and distribution to sbareholders by 57 per cent.

Group assets now exceed £2,000 million and Group net profit, after deduction of outside shareholders' interests in subsidiaries, rose by 18 per cent to £11.7

The Group now bas 230 branches in 36 countries and Group interests bave been extended to Cyprus, the New Hebrides, New Zealand and the Yemen Arab Republic.

Hongkong Finance Ltd. and Mercantile Credits Ltd. again improved earnings. despite the continuation of difficult conditions in Australia.

British Acceptance Corporation achieved very satisfactory progress in Canada and now operates in Toronto as well as Vancouver and Edmonton.

In Hong Knng trade and business showed steady improvement, desoite the problems created by stagnation and severe import controls abroad, and an 11½ per cent growth in domestic experts was achieved. Hong Kong has increasingly become a fineal point from which to direct business in the Far East and Pacific.

The widespread inflating and stagnation in the advanced countries affected trade in many primary commodities and demand for manufactured goods from the more rapidly developing Asian countries.

World trade should benefit both from a more realistic and flexible exchange system and from a revival of economin growth in the United States.

There was recognition that the "green revolution" eased but did not entirely resolve the problem of adequate and balanced food supplies and so did not remove the urgent need for family planning programmes, if the benefits of development were not to be overwhelmed by increasing population

There was a greater awareness of the need to give priority to processing and light industry to promote development and provide employment.

There was a resurgence of interest in thu possibility that commercially attractive nfi-shore oil resources might be found in the seas around South East and East

The Group has nffices or subsidiaries in: London, Hamburg, Paris, Geneva, New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Sydney and Vancouver, and across Asia and North

Amongst the Bank's subsidiaries are: Mercantile Bank Ltd., The British Bank of the Midole East, Hang Seng Bank, Way-hong Investment Ltd., the Hongkong Bank of California, Hongkong Finance of Sydney, and British Acceptance Corporation of Vancouver.

The Bank also has interests in: International Commercial Bank, London; Exporters Refinance Corporation, London; Mercantile Credits, Sydney; and New Zealand Investment Mortgage & Deposit Co. Ltd., Auckland.

BLONDIE THEY'RE DRIP-DRY, WASH AND WEAR, AND UNSHRINKABLE NOW, HERE'S YOU NEVER ALSO PERMANENT NO, PAIR OF PANTS LIKE THAT

BRIDGE

By Alan Truscott big its.

A singleton jack is usually a worthless asset as far as the opening bidder is concerned, and South discounted his club jack when he opened the disgramed deal with one spade. He would have preferred that jack in some other suit, but ironically it was in the right place.

North responded two clubs, and his partner rebid diamonds. At this point, North had a rebid problem. An 11-point responding hand often presents a problem, and here he had to choose between an underbid and an overbid. North chose the optimistic course by jumping to three spades, and South had no choice but to continue to game. The more conservative preference hid of two spades on the second round would have ended the auction.

♦ Q92 ♥ A86 ♦ KQJ6 ♣ A9654 SOUTH (D) A AK 1085 ♦ A952 North 2 ♣ 3 ♠ West Pass Pass Pass Pass Pass West led the heart king.

When West led the heart king and the dummy appeared, South could see 10 potential tricks, five in trumps, three in clubs, and the two red aces. However, dummy was dangerously short of entries.

The heart ace from dummy won the first trick and the club two was led. South hoped that somebody would take the ace, but East correctly ducked: To play the ace would have been an error whatever South's holding in clubs: South's jeck won and the declarer was now an entry short in the dummy, His only substantial hope for 10 tricks was that West held the spade jack, so South led a low trump and finessed the nine.

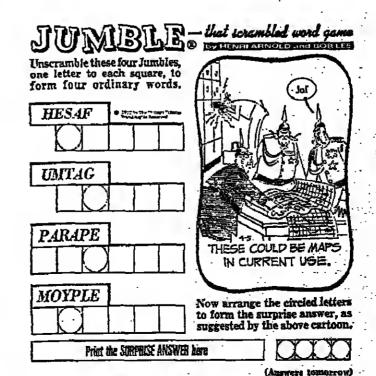

When the nine won, it was an easy matter to ruff out the club ace. Declarer then drew trumps, ending in dummy, cashed dummy's club winners and re-entered his hand with a diamond lead to the ace. His remaining trump brought home the contract.

THE PARTY'S OVER The Failure of Politics in America By David S. Broder. Harper & Row. 280 pp. $7.95. Reviewed by Richard T. Stout

IT is no secret that public con- of quality and a foreign involve. fidence in America's political ment, which alone, Broder as-stem has undergone serious series, shows what lack of resystem has undergone serious erosion in recent years. Fully 79 percent of college students queried by Gallup two years ago found the system unresponsive. The memory of the 1968 Democratic National Convention Ingers. The Republican fear tactics in the 1970 election are not forgotten. And now we are read-ing of the GOP-TTT caper. The charges and counter-charges of the surplus of Democratic presidential candidates compete for headlines and TV time.

It must take courage for David S. Broder of The Washington Post, one of America's most respected political observers, to come out with a book asserting what so many have come to doubt: That the salvation of America's faltering governing institutions lies to a large degree in the Democratic and Republican parties, if only they would begin to function responsibly and if the public will is there. Broder doesn't deny that these are two

He calls his book "The Party's Over," but the title is intended as a pun, not a prophecy. Broder states at the outset that "it is not a cheerful book," and he warns that current trends portend a "further fracturing of the already enfechled party structure," a potential for in-tensified politics of confrontation, even the possibility of emergency and acceptance of "a plausible demagogue."

"That possibility sounds like scare talk." Broder writes "Some will dismiss it as apocalyptic nonsense. But things have been happening in this country that I would not have believed when I came to Washington 16 years and four Presidents ago": the Kennedy and King assassina-tions, the bombings, the nation's capital nightmarishly ablaze, police and people clashing savagely. We've all seen the signs of political breakdown, but few have viewed the causes as closely and thoughtfully as Broder. Skill-fully, guarantly, he delineates the erosion of what he calls "responsible party government" over the last four administrations.

Dwight Eisenhower shunned particanship for so long while he played. "legislative patty-cake" with Senate majority leader Lyndon Johnson and House speaker Sam Rayburn that be calmed America into an "expen-sive holiday" from mounting domestic travail and a serious examination of foreign policy. Finally, he helped plunge his party into the abyes of the 1964

John Kennedy understood the non-party government, and we importance of strong party responsibility for effective leader—

Though perhaps not cheerful. ship but gave it only lip-service for too long. When he finally began to work toward political reforms that would strengthened the system, too lit-tle time was left so his effect was "equivocal."

Broder gives Lyndon Johnson the worst marks. Here was a man who squandered his gigantic mandate in a "half-med, halfdrunk Texas square dance" that brought a legislative orgy spare sponsible party government can mean. In his hankering for con-sensus, Johnson forgot that voters have a right to object that parties by nature should enhance this right: that, really a political party should be a key instrument in forming policy or assuring that it does not evolve frum a secretive and suspicion leader.

Richard Nixon, Broder finds understands the theory of party responsibility more clearly than the others, but so far has kent himself from the beginnings of his self-declared goal of responsible Republican government h his own Paylovian rhetoric, hi erratically changing policies, the small-mindedness of his side and the failure of follow-through Thus "the prospects of America achieving responsible party gor-ernment under Richard Nixe appear remote. The country has not been brought together. And time is running out."

To understand the term Te sponsible party government" may not be so simple as Broder as-serts. "Essentially," he writes the term, "suggests that there be a link between the voters and the elective officials of our democracy, provided by the political party to which both give their support." Aligning voters, of ficials and party is not easy, w course, as Republican Nixon will his Democratic Congress can at-

But by their durability, Broder maintains, the Republican and Democratic parties have assumed an importance that is taken to much for granted. A mayor, governor or President may last but a term or two, a pressure group —public or private—but for the duration of a special cause or interest. Parties remain the basis for what goes on election day, which is the only alternative to policy being formed in the streets. Ideally, parties are the organs for helping originate policies, and selecting capoidate pledged to act on these policies at whatever level of government Obviously, the two parties have fallen short, and Broder reor-nizes that his argument will be viewed with "enormous skepti-cism." "The parties, it will be said, have been around for years; if they are the answer, then why do we have the problems we have now? My reply, of course is that we have not seen responsible party government in this country-in Washington or in most states and cities in the 16 years I have been covering national politics. Instead, rehave had fractured, irresponsible,

Owners Reject Players' Latest Offer

Baseball's Opening Strikes Out

The players' new proposal in volved no additional money con-tribution from the owners, such as the $11,000 per omb they had asked for earlier.

Rather, Miller proposed that the surplus cavings generated by the pension fund be used to compensate for the 17 percent cost-of-living increase the play-ers feel has digited the pension plan. This surplus would amount to slightly more than $1 million, Explaining the rejection, Gahe-rin said: "Our actuaries said it was an imprudent approach to the problem."

Ne Meetings Set

Gaharin said he and Miller had. no other meetings scheduled. T won't have any further contact with him before the (owners) meeting and I don't know what contact I'll have with him after that," Gaherin said.

Asked if the situation looked as if the strike would be a long one, he said, "I'm straid you'ra

Miller, who agreed that the strike could be lengthy, said the owners' rejection clearly showed the real issue in the dispute is not the money but the owners' desire to "punish the players." The owners were, and are, in-tent on making the players eat dirt," Miller said. "I will let tha players know that the owners are insistent that the players bend down and kiss the shoes of the owners. The owners have now taken on the full responsibility for prolonging the strike right into the season. I think the own-proposal. Miller said they would accept the $490,000 the owners have offered to cover the increased costs of the health benefits part of the agreement that expired at midnight last Friday. That brings the owners' total annual contribution to $5,940,000.

In addition, the players pro-posed that the surplus from the pension fund for the contract year be applied to pension benefits, which the owners had refused to increase.

. The surplus, Miller said, was created by higher interest rates, overestimating the funds needed for permanently disabled players and overfunding of the plan beceuse of players who did not play long enough (four years) to qualify for a pension.

The key to the surplus is the interest rate on the $44 million invested with the Equitable Lifa Assurance Society.

It All Started With Dirty Pants

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, April 4 (NYT).-Yank Robinson, an outfielder, pitcher and catcher, who also played four infield positions for the St. Louis Browns, showed up on the field this day wearing dirty pants. Ordered to spruce up, he sent a boy ecross the street for clean pants but the gatekeeper wouldn't let the kid back into the park. When Robinson cursed the gateman, Chris Von der Ahe, the Browns owner, berated Robinson from the stands, fining him $25.

Robinson's teammates vowed that if the finestood, they would not go to Kansas City for the next series. Robinson said he would apologize if the fine were lifted but Von der Abe said. "I am still the boss of the club and I intend to run it my own way." (Contemporary reporters quoted him with a German accent: "I am still der poss."). He threatened to fire Robinson accent blobbinson. son and blacklist him.

The other players were persuaded to go to Eansas City, where they lost three straight. Suggestions that they had dumped the games to teach their employer a lesson were denounced Charles Comiskey, the Browns' manager. At Comiskey's insistence, Robinson was reinstated.

Describing the affair as "the most serious" revolt ever known in a ball club," the St. Louis Globe-Democrat declared, "The time has come when ballplayers will, if pressed too far, assert their independence."

'Get Off the Earth'

This was one of several abortive strikes in 1839, as reported by the baseball historian, Dr. Harold Seymour. Nine years before that, tha New York Mercury had exhorted players to "rise up in their manhood and rebel" against the reserva system, arbitrary fines, the blacklist, salary imits and other grievances. In 1885, a Polladelphia sportswriter named William H. Voltz tried to form a players' association to create a benefit fund for needy players but players were reluctant to follow an outsider.

Then on Oct. 23, 1885, nine members of the New York Giants rallied behind one of their own forming the Brotherhood of Professional Base Bail Players with the brilliant John Montgomery Ward as president. As Brooklyn fans were to say of Branch Rickey many years later, Ward was a man of many facets, all turned on. As a pitcher he won 47 games one year and 28 the next. After an arm injury finished him as a pitcher, he excelled at shortstop. He managed Brooklyn and New York, became one of the top lawyers in the city and an outstanding amateur golfer. "The time has arrived," a player told The New York Times, when the pleyers must take some action. Legislation has been solely in the interests of the clubs. The players have been ignored at every meeting, and restrictions one after another have been placed upon them until now they can stand it no longer. A club can engage a player, reduce his salary to $1,000 and compel him to play for that sum, even though he may have a standing offer of five times that amount elsewhere."

A popular and energetic leader, Ward won a few minor concessions, prompting the Sporting News to hail him as "the St. George of base."

On important issues, however, the owners either stalled or made promises that were never kept. Talk of a general strike kept cropping up. "Nonsense," said John B. Day, who owned the Giants. "A Little Bluebeard story," said Chicago's Al G. Spaloing, "Absurd," said Arthur H. Soden

The Strike

Even as the clouds gathered, Fred Stearns, president of the Pittsburgh club, was making statements that would win him immortality as the Charley Finley of his day, "They will play in Pittsburgh," ha said of Deacon White and Jack Rowe, "or get off the earth." The breaking point was reached Nov. 5, 1889, when the Brotherhood seceded from the National League and formed the Players' League. A. manifesto reviewing relations with the National

Leagua was addressed "To the Public":
"There was a time when the league stood for dollars and cents. Once it looked for the elevation of the game and the honest exhibition of the sport; today its eyes are on the turnstiles. Men have come into the business for no other motive than to exploit it for every deliar as though they were sheep, instead of American citizens. 'Recevation' became another name for property right in the player. By a combination among themselves stronger than the strongest trust. they [the owners] were able to enforce the most erbitrary measures, and the player had either to submit or get out of the profession. Even the disbandment and retirement of a club did not free the players from the octopus clutch, for they were then peddled to the highest bidder.

A majority of the press sided with the Estab-lizhment. Henry Chadwick of The Brooklyn Eagle called the players "ingrates," "seceders" and 'men without principle, who knew not how to keep their words and had no sense of shame." O. P. Caylor referred to them in the Sporting Times as "drunken knaves who would be idling on street corners but for the opportunity the National League owners opened for them." Now, Four Score Later...

One paper described the members of the Brotherhood attending a meeting wearing fur-lined overcoats, silk hats and patent leather shoes with $5,000 brilliants in their scarves carrying gold-headed canes and smoking Rosa Perfectos at 25 cents apiece but wearing no gloves because it would be difficult to pull them over the "flashlights" on their crooked, broken

"Don't mistake them," wrote this paragon of repertorial honesty, "for the poor, miserable, overworked, underpaid, haggard, starving slaves of the League tyrants. Nor is it a meeting of the Vanderbilts, Goulds, etc.; it is but a gathering of the Brotherhood men."

The strike and the Players' League lasted one year. Spalding was the general who won the war, but his report should he required reading for all baseball owners today: "Not in the 20 years' history of professional club organizations was there recorded such an exceptional season of financial disaster and general demoralization as characterized the professional season of 1890."

Former Brooklyn Dodger star Jackie Robinson strongly supports the strike. "I congratulate the players.

"The average ballplayer doesn't spend more than five or six years in the majors, and they want to get something so their future

"The fans will recognize that the ballplayers aren't like people who sit behind a desk. They may make hig money for a few years, but Uncle Sam takes a big hunk of that, and then they're out of baseball," Robinson said.

Ne Help to Oldtimers

Most of the oldtimers never made anything near the average salaries pulled down by major leaguers of today. Some of them have hegun drawing their pen-sions at fixed rates, so any improvement in the pension won't benefit them any. (Robinson draws about $250 a month.) Enos Slaughter, now baseball coach at Duke University, said the owners should "hire minor leaguers and keep the game going ... I think the players are hiting the hand that feeds them." Under the rules of the pension plan, Slaughter's stipend was frozen in 1966 when he turn:d

50 end began to collect it. He did not share in the higher benefits which began in 1967, nor will he realize anything from the current negotiations. But Bobby Richardson, an allstar second baseman for the Yankees until 1966, has not started to collect, so the players are, in effect, negotiating for him, too. Richardson, however,

Fischer Says Yes To Chess Terms

AMSTERDAM, April 4 (UPI). -American chess challenger Bobby Fischer has withdrawn his objections to the money terms offered by Belgrade as one of the sites for the world chess title match, a communiqué from the International Chess Federation said today. The communiqué said Fischer's acceptance came in a telegram from the U.S. Chess Federation

The FIDE announcement confirmed that "today we received the cable to Belgrade asking if they are willing to resume their preparations."

But the match still was in doubt because the Belgrade organizers of the match said they had no reason to reconsider their decision to cancel preparations for the championship. In a cable to FIDE, the Yugo-slav Chess Federation said: "We have no grounds to reconsider our withdrawal from the organization of the match June 22 to July 18." The Belgrade chess officials said, however, that the match would go ahead as scheduled if the Belgrade organizers received. an assurance from FIDE that this month's mortgage payment that the somehody who once said it was a businessman.

Businessmen are constantly earying that it was business that made America what it is today. It is one of the things businessmen do. like eating in expense-account restaurants. In fact, it is the first thing they learn at business school.

Students who cannot say, "Business is what made America what it is today" without bursting into laughter are immediately blackballed from the Chamber of Commerce.

Business is no career for 5.5sies. It demands courage, because the businessman never knows when competition may break out. Worse, if he meets with his competitors to make an agreement to keep competition from breaking out, he never can be sure the Justice Department will not eatch him.

In today's fiercely noncompetitive world, business also demands an extraordinary degree of incompetence. Oldtimers in the business world, men old enough to remember what it was like a generation or two ago, are often astonished at the amount of sheer incompetence required to get ahead in business today, Nobody who knew anything about running a railroad, for example, stood a chance of reaching a top management position on the Penn

A few tried. They were laughed out of the board room. "what do you think we are running around here?" they were asked.

Another characteristic of the American businessman is his daring. If he has a government contract to make a new weapon. and his costs are running $200 million over estimates, and he still hasn't produced a weapon. and his company is about to go bankrupt, he must be daring. He must be nervy enough to go to gage payment on it.

This is called the free enterprise system. Businessmen are fond of saving, "The free enterprise system is what made America what it is today," and they are right.

Because of free enterprise every American can own two cars, both of which will probably be recalled by the factory for safety defects.

Ingenuity is also required. Without ingenuity, the tax loophole might never have been invented, and thousands upon thousands of businessmen might be getting taned at this very moment at rates reflecting no gratitude at all for everything business has done for America.

Ingenuity daring, courage and incompetence-these would count for nothing in the business world without windom and sagacity to match. There is an old boardroom saying. "It's no good to dream up a new tax loophole if you haven't got a friend on the Senate Finance Committee," they

Above all, however, business today is concerned with govern-ment. The old-fashioned businessman who got rich by making a better product and selling cheaper than his competitor would be scorped in today's business world because he took so little interest in public affairs.

Without contacts in Washington, he would be in deep trouble. There would be no tax loophole to belp him get rich faster, no protection from the Justice Department when he was caught trying to buy out all his competition, no favorable rulings from the regulatory agencies with power over his business, and nobody to pick up a telephone for him in the Senate or White House when he wanted to weep.

"The business of America is business" Calvin Coolidge said. That was 50 years ago when businessmen still wasted their energies worrying about making railroads run. Nowadays the business of America is government, and the business of government is business.

Somewhere, there is probably still a business or two that makes something good that really works, but don't bet this mooth's mort national billboard industry, the federal government says that it is ready to begin an all-out assault on "sign pollution" along America's main highways.

Department of Transportation officials in Washington now predict that at least 100,000 of the country's 800,000 roadside biliboards will be toppled within the next year. The rest, they say, will be removed in time for the 1976 celebration of the nation's 200th year.

Congress first passed an antibilihoard law—known as the Highway Beautification Act—in 1965. But at the urging of the billboard industry, many states ignored the legislation, and, as a result, in all the time eince then no more than a few hundred of the signs have come down. In recent months, however, the Transportation Department hae turned up the pressure and persuaded most of the holdouts to go along. Among them was Missouri. Its compliance program, which became law on March 30, is the product of a bitter fight that was decided, finally, when the issue was reduced to hard cash.

Threats

According to John Francis, the Transportation Department's beautification director, holdout states like Missouri have come into line only when threatened—as provided under the 1965 act-with the annual loss of 10 percent of their share of federal highway construction funds. "It was just that simple," Mr. Francis said, adding, "We're really serious about this now." His agency will pay 75 percent of the total removal cost, estimated at $400 million, or $500 a board. State governments must pay the rest. The 800,000 billboards echeduled to come down-excluding those in and around communities and those set back from the road by an eighth of a mile—are strucg along 250,000 miles of the main highways in the United States, That means that on the average there are more than three signs to every

What's wrong with that? the billboard industry would like to know.

"If the boards come down, how will people know where to go?" asks Paul Spooner, a Minneapolis lawyer who has frequently represented billboard companies and their trade

"There is great danger at this point," he continues, "not only to the sign people but to the travel industry as a whole.

Millions and millions are at stake."

The industry, which reports an annual gross income appreaching a billion dollars and a work force of 150,000 in 15,000 companies, plans to go on fighting the 1365 law-dismayed now but as determined as ever.

One of its last hopes is the Commission on Highway Beautification. It was recently set up by Congress to hear second thoughts about the 1965 act, which was passed at 2:30 one morning so President Lyndon B. Johnson could present it as a birthday present to his environment-conscious wife. Currently, the commission is holding half a dozen hearings around the country. Its recommendations will go to Congress

TO THE CONTRACT OF SECTION SERVICES OF THE SECTION OF THE SECTION

Fighting

For the time being, however, indications are that only South Dakota will continue to fight the beautification law, though several other states will probably not get around to enacting compliance programs before late spring. Among them

South Dakota intends to challenge the act in court. In deciding to ignore the billboard lobby and assess the penalty provided in the 1965 act if necessary, the Transportation Department said that Congress, after so many do-nothing years, had appropriated enough funds to begin removal of signs. Forty million dollars is available this year.

Money in hand, the department set March 31 as the compliance deadline for most of the two dozen states stillrefusing to adopt removal programs, Missouri was in that groop.

The Missouri General Assembly struggled for weeks before passing a compliance program two days before the deadline. If Missouri had failed to act the penalty for this year alone would have been $11.5 million of a $115-million grant, In Sonth Dakota, if the court challenge fails, the penalty will be $3.4 million of $34 million And if Texas or Illinois decides to ignore the act, they will lose $27.8 million and $32 million of $278 million and $320 million respectively.

"No state can stand such penalties very long," said State Sen, William Waters as the Missouri compliance program passed through his roads committee. Transportation Department officials say that the $400 million needed to remove the billboards scattered throughout all 50 states will cover reimbursement of both sign and land owners. Within the industry, a sign valued at $450 is not uncommon and typical land rent for a sign site in a rural area is $50 a year. Under the 1965 act, no commercial sign may be placed within 660 feet of an interstate or primary highway running through a rural area. In built-up areas, however, signs may be put up almost at will, though some cities, such as Denver, are beginning to enact restrictions.

Congress justified rural regulation on the ground that federal funds pay half the construction costs of primary roads and 90 percent of the construction costs of interstates. Most of the interstate system, being new, is already relatively free of billboards within 660 feet, However, jumbo signs are beginning to go up beyond that distance at some points, prompting concern in the Transportation Department, It is along primary roads that the billboard problem is most serious. In many areas, the signs are packed closely together, cinttering up the landscape and the motorist's mind with gaudy pleas to Stop! Eat! Sleep! Drink! and Be Merry!
